Trapping, an ancient art, has been refined into the most sophisticated and profitable of modern hunting techniques. After three decades in the nation's top trapping magazines, Trapping magazine has become the most authoritative source of information on the art of trapping. Now, for the first time, the magazine is available in a new format, a new price, and a new focus. The new Trapping magazine is a true reflection of the trapping industry, and it is the only magazine of its kind. It is the only magazine that is truly for the trapper, and it is the only magazine that is truly for the reader.

Test Your Trapping

Even if you are not a trapper, you can still benefit from the information in this magazine. The magazine is a true reflection of the trapping industry, and it is the only magazine of its kind. TRAPPING CAREER

When they started to trap the rabbits in the 18th and 19th centuries, trappers were not just hunting for sport. They were hunting for a living. The rabbits were a valuable source of food, and they were also a source of fur. The trappers were not just hunting for sport. They were hunting for a living. The rabbits were a valuable source of food, and they were also a source of fur. The trappers were not just hunting for sport. They were hunting for a living.

"True Image" Aim of Nun In Fight Against Prejudice

By Sister Mary Ann

The Sisters of the Holy Family, a group of nuns from the Holy Family Mission in Regina, are working to change the public's perception of the Indian community. Sister Mary Ann, who has been in the community for 15 years, says that the nuns are often misunderstood and that they want to show the "true image" of the Indian people.

The nuns are involved in various social service projects, including running a day care center and a food bank. They also provide counseling and support for individuals in the community. Sister Mary Ann emphasizes that the nuns are not just there to help, but to build relationships and understand the needs of the community.

TRAPPING CAREER

For Market Research?

The Indian community is becoming more involved in the trapping industry, particularly in the area of market research. This is a new and growing field that involves studying the market for various types of furs and skins.

Many young people are entering this career, seeing it as a way to make a good living while also contributing to their community. They are working for various trapping companies and are responsible for finding and trapping animals, as well as marketing their products.

Big-Brother Club

The Big-Brother Club is a group of young people who are working to help and support their community. They are involved in various projects, including running a food bank and providing counseling services.

Shaw-Town Job Problem

There is a significant job problem in Shaw-Town, a small community in the Northwest Territories. Many young people are looking for work, but there are very few opportunities available. This is a major concern for the community, as it is affecting the lives of many young people.

Problems and Causes

There are many problems facing the Indian community, and it is important to understand the causes of these problems. Some of the major causes include poverty, lack of education, and discrimination. These factors are all contributing to the challenges that the community is facing.
